Laminated insulated glass units for curtain wall

How's laminated insulated glass units for curtain wall made?

Laminated insulated glass units also called VSG DGUs, which produced by using high quality annealed glass, put it into the tempering furnace and heats it well above its transition temperature of 564 °C to around 680 °C, the glass is then rapidly cooled with forced air drafts. Tempering process can change the glass 5 times harder than ordinary float glass. After tempered, we take one piece of 6mm low e tempered glass and one piece of 6.38mm clear laminated glass sealed around the edges with an argon air space between, to form a laminated IGUs.
